When did you fall in love with technology?

I have always had a love for technology and the benefits it provides for people. I started out selling, and fixing cellphones. That love has led me to really nerding out to computer hardware, software, and eventually many different programs and languages.

I have an IT consulting business to serve businesses in technology managed services and cybersecurity. My business goals for my company are to be well versed in supporting, and distributing technical services of Apple, Microsoft, and Linux to mid-sized and enterprise level companies globally. Given this undertaking, the constant lessons I have/am continuing to learn is to be transparent in conducting business and taking care of employees and clients alike.

A dose of motivation for the community

Do your best to learn and grow everyday and bring others along while doing so; because now it's a party. Turn obstacles and opportunities into an amusement park ride. When they arise challenge yourself to have fun over coming them, and share what you learned and the fun you had riding and overcoming it.

What if I told you that the true essence of success lies not in external validation, but in the profound connection we build with ourselves?

Liking Yourself

Success must start from within. Read that again. To truly thrive and achieve our full potential, we must learn to embrace and love ourselves unconditionally. No arrogance. No self-centeredness. The focus is recognizing our inherent worth, acknowledging our strengths, and accepting our flaws with kindness and compassion.

When we like ourselves, we become our own greatest cheerleaders.

Liking What You Do

Passion! This is the fuel that ignites our souls and sets our hearts ablaze. When what we do is more than a means to an end, it becomes an expression of our deepest desires and aspirations.

Embrace it. It fosters creativity and innovation. It infuses joy and fulfillment into our daily lives.

When we like what we do, each task is a labor of love.

Liking How You Do It

You, yes you, are blessed with a distinctive set of talents, experiences, and perspectives. Your individuality makes you shine in a world full of diversity. Embracing your unique style and remaining true to ourselves helps you deal with society.

By setting ourselves apart from the crowd, we create a lasting impact on the world.
